OBJECTIVES AND CONCEPT OF THE PRACTICE

To foster academic and interdisciplinary research in Intellectual Property Rights (IPR), cyber law, and competition law while promoting innovation, capacity-building, and policy-oriented dialogue.

THE CONTEXT

The establishment of the Centre for Intellectual Property Rights (CIPR) at DME was driven by the need to address evolving challenges in IPR, its intersections with cyber law and competition law, and to promote innovation in a knowledge-driven economy. It aimed to bridge the gap between theoretical legal education and practical applications in these domains.

THE PRACTICE

The Practice CIPR focuses on interdisciplinary and empirical research in IPR, offering workshops, conferences, and events to empower students and faculty. Major Challenges include lack of awareness, complex legal process, limited access to resources, limited exposure in curriculum especially in management and media, Infringement and Plagiarism and ethical concerns.

THE EVIDENCE

Evidence of Success CIPR has successfully conducted workshops, published research papers, events and initiated a comprehensive textbook on IPR. These activities have enhanced academic visibility, student participation, and the institution's reputation in legal education.

PROBLEMS ENCOUNTERED AND RESOURCES REQUIRED

Problems Encountered and Resources Required Key challenges include limited financial resources, recruiting subject-matter experts, and establishing sustainable partnerships with industry and academia. Adequate funding and dedicated personnel are essential for expanding CIPR's initiatives.

NOTES

This practice showcases DME's commitment to quality education, research, and societal contribution. It can inspire similar initiatives in other institutions to strengthen IPR-related legal education and research.

IMPORTANCE OF INITIATIVE

The CIPR initiative ensures that students and faculty are equipped with cutting-edge knowledge, promoting innovation and safeguarding intellectual property. It also elevates DME's standing as a leader in progressive legal education and research.
